Statement

Life is agreeable to me; I experience it as much as the world's necessity allows, and through the observation of everything else.
I see and recognize mythic/ritual currents in myself and in what remains.
I do not yield my body to another!
From the trees, I learn to stay patient on the other side of the street, and not to approach those who are at war; for this war is not mine.
I am here, and the rest, the clouds, the hands
I watch them, and when the time comes, my subconscious throws them out.

Within me burns a flame of conflict between experience and tradition, between the witness and the landscape.
Perhaps there are only these two "bodies"
and I sit in a corner, watching them.
